The interdisciplinary nature of life sciences research

- Bioinformatics: Integration of biology and computer science to analyze and interpret biological data, including genomics, proteomics, and other omics approaches.
- Biophysics: Combining principles of physics with biology to understand biological phenomena, structures, and interactions at the molecular and cellular levels.
- Biochemistry: Merging biology and chemistry to study the chemical processes and substances that occur within living organisms.
- Biotechnology: Application of biological knowledge to develop technologies and products for diverse industries, such as medicine, agriculture, and environmental science.
- Pharmacology: Explores the study of the interaction between drugs and living organisms, combining elements of biology and chemistry to understand therapeutic effects.

New Information

Yes might be always held this type of program

Thank you

It is been a nice sessions

Take online programs for future job improve network connection please

Very pleasant and good person to talked

Very good information

Arrange such amazing lessons in future also

Very informative Successful Webinar

All sessions are good

Over-all webinar was excellent but there was some interrupt network

Please take such activities regularly

This program is about the Carrier Avinues in the life sciences so this lecture is most beneficial to us. in this lecture the teacher gives the information about the job opportunities in the life sciences, and job opportunities in the research field in the life sciences. so this program is very important to us. I will say Thanks to Rankhamb Sir to organize this program. And thanks all teachers yo guide ourself.
