Abstract of the Programme

The department of English regularly organising the various activities for the enhancement of the knowledge of the college students regarding the English language and literature. Under various activities, the guest lecture is the crucial activity of the department. Under this activity, Dr.Rajiv Aherkar, The Head, Department of English, SSM Arts College, Gangakhed was invited for the speech on the topic "English Language and Carrier Opportunities" on April 12, 2023. Dr.Vitthal Jaybhaye was the chairman of the guest lecture. Dr.Vitthal Jaybhaye has introduced the programme as well as the chief guest Dr.Rajiv Aherkar. He also insisted on the detailed activities of the department of English of the college. Dr.Rajiv Aherkar has completed his PhD research on the novels and short stories of Sane Guruji. He focused on the challenges before Maharashtriyans people regarding the English language and literature teaching. Yet people are not seriously aware about the English language education. He also stated that, once you have discerned your interests, finding the right career path that aligns with your skills and values may seem like an intimidating task. However, the University's English undergraduate program prepares you for a variety of career possibilities following skills you will gain in critical thinking, creativity, and in the ability to process, interpret, and provide information to a wide range of audiences. These flexible skills that the English B.A. prepare you to adapt to an ever-changing job market. Though continuing your English studies in graduate school, Law school, or in other areas (e.g., library research, business, humanities, social sciences), as many do, may broaden your career opportunities. If you pursue an English degree, you will have a number of opportunities to develop skills and abilities valued by employers. Careers no longer follow a clear path, but develop as you demonstrate how your particular knowledge, skills, and abilities fit particular roles. An English degree prepares you for a number of jobs by providing you with opportunities to develop core writing, research, analytical, oral communication, collaboration, project management, and critical thinking skills. Mr. Korde D.B. proposed the vote of thanks and BATY student Ku.Pooja Rode conducted the programme.

Outcomes of the Programme

Initially, the students were not aware about the skills and opportunities from English language and literature. After discussion of this guest lecture, students asking various questions regarding the opportunists in English. The students were Content Writer. If you like to research new topics and write about them, you could be suited to be a Content Writer. You could write blog posts, whitepapers, case studies, or other research-based content. Starting out as a Content Writer can lead to a job as a Content Marketing Manager, Content Editor, or Editorial Director. If you are detail-oriented and attentive to language issues, you could be suited to work as an Editorial Assistant. You could help manage the content production process by conducting research, fact-checking, writing content, and proofreading. You can find these positions with magazines, newspapers, and other publications. If you have demonstrated leadership and editing experience, you could be an Editorial Director. You could help mentor and manage in-house writers, manage content calendars, and develop content strategies. Editorial Directors must have exceptional writing and editing skills and enjoy delivering and receiving constructive feedback.
